SCHOOL REPORT.

To the citizens of Madbury:—I have the honor of submitting a report of the schools of this town, for the past year.

DISTRICT No. 1.—John W. Emery, Prudential Committee. Summer term,—Miss Zella A. Stevens, Teacher; No. of scholars 8; average attendance 6; length of school in weeks 9; wages of teacher per month $28; No. of scholars not absent 3; No. attending to reading 8; spelling 8; penmanship 6; arithmetic 6; geography 6; grammar 2; composition 2; No. of scholars in the district between 5 and 15 years of age, not attending school anywhere 3.

Fall term,—Miss Zella A. Stevens, Teacher; No. of scholars 7; average attendance 6 4-25; length of school in weeks 10; wages of teacher per month $28; No. of scholars not absent 3; No. attending to reading 7; spelling 7; penmanship 6; geography 6; composition 2; No. of scholars in the district between 5 and 15 years of age, not attending school anywhere 4.

Winter term,—Miss Cynthia J. Tasker, Teacher; No. of scholars 9; average attendance 8; length of school in weeks 11; wages of teacher per month $28; No. of scholars not absent 1; No. attending to reading 9; spelling 9; penmanship 7; arithmetic 9; geography 7; grammar 3.

This district has been very fortunate in securing good teachers for the past year. The order was excellent, and, at the closing examinations the pupils exhibited much promptness in their recitations, making it very evident that they attended school for the purpose of gaining knowledge, and that their teachers had labored to have them understand perfectly, what they had been over in their studies.

DISTRICT No. 2.—Joseph Fernald, Prudential Committee. Summer term,—Miss Lydia Jenkins, Teacher; No. of scholars 25; average attendance 19 29 40; length of school in weeks 12; wages of teacher per month $32; No. of scholars not absent 1; No. attending to reading 25; spelling 25; penmanship 19; arithmetic 20; geography 8; grammar 11; composition 11; United States history 2; book-keeping 1; latin 1; algebra 3; physiology 1.

Winter term,—Miss Lydia Jenkins, Teacher; No. of scholars 25; average attendance 16 79-80; length of school in weeks 16; wages of teacher per month $32; No. attending to reading 25; spelling 25; penmanship 18; arithmetic 22; geography 10; grammar 11; composition 8; United States history 2; book-keeping 3; latin 1; algebra 2.

This school contains some fine scholars; all were diligent at their books and obedient to the wishes of their teacher.

DISTRICT No. 3.—Alonzo D. Nute, Prudential Committee. Summer term,—Miss M. Abbie Nute, Teacher; No. of scholars 10; average attendance 8 1-14; wages per month $24; No. of scholars not absent 5; No. attending to reading 10; spelling 10; penmanship 6; arithmetic 6; geography 2; grammar 1; United States history 1; No. of scholars in the district between 5 and 15 years of age, not attending school anywhere 2.

This was Miss Nute's first attempt at teaching. Judging from the appearance of the school, I think that she endeavored to discharge her duties faithfully. The order was good, and the scholars made commendable improvement.

Winter term,—Mr. Arthur G. Hoyt, Teacher; No. of scholars 15; average attendance 12 8-9; length of school in weeks 9 3-10; wages of teacher per month $28; No. of scholars attending to reading 12; spelling 12; penmanship 10; arithmetic 13; geography 8; grammar 4; United States history 3; physiology 2; book-keeping 1; algebra 2; geometry 1.

The winter school, containing some well advanced scholars, passed a good examination at the close, and I think that under Mr. Hoyt's careful instruction, they employed their time to a good advantage.

DISTRICT No. 4.—Martin V. B. Felker, Prudential Committee. Summer term,—Miss Cora A. Locke, Teacher; No. of scholars 19; average attendance 18; length of school in weeks 8; wages of teacher per month $28; No. of scholars not absent 7; No. attending to reading 19; spelling 19; penmanship 10; arithmetic 11; geography 3; grammar 2; composition 3; United States history 3; drawing 1; No. of scholars in the district between 5 and 15 years of age, not attending school anywhere 2.

Miss Locke's school appeared very quiet and orderly, under good control and discipline; I did not have time for a thorough examination of the classes at the close, but should infer from those recitations which I did listen to, that her labors had not been in vain.

Winter term,—Miss Lucy Stiles, Teacher; No. of scholars 23; length of school in weeks 12 2-5; wages of teacher per month $30; No. of scholars attending to reading 21; spelling 21; penmanship 15; arithmetic 18; geography 13; grammar 7; algebra; rhetoric 1.

Miss Stiles is well qualified in all respects, as a teacher. The pupils in this district are industrious, and punctual in their attendance, with these qualities the school could not fail to be praise-worthy.

GENERAL REMARKS.

In closing this report I trust that I may be pardoned if I call your attention to a few remarks.

I think that for the most part, our schools this season have been quite successful, and it has not been due to the teachers alone, for the teachers, without the aid of the parents and scholars, can accomplish but little; however diligently they may apply themselves to their work, their labors will not leave much of any impression on the school, when they take their departure, unless they have such assistance. As a general thing the teacher has to bear all the blame, if, at the close of the term, a scholar, who goes to school one day and stays at home the next, is found to retain little or no knowledge of what he has been over during the term. I would ask, is it possible to get such a one interested in a book, when his mind is fixed on what he did the day before, or on what he will do the next day, when he has liberty to absent himself from the schoolroom? It is utterly impossible.

Punctuality is one of the important requirements among our pupils; if they are diligent in that respect, interest in their books and obedience will surely follow; consequently, if the teachers are at all fitted for their vocation, the scholars will not fail to make rapid improvement. They will find study to be a pleasant, rather than an irksome task; and the teacher will exclaim in the words of the poet,

"I now find in each pupil a treasure,
And my daily task is indeed a pleasure."

Our schools were instituted for the purpose of promoting the cause of education, thereby giving the poor an equal chance with the rich to obtain, with the aid of books and an instructor, an education that will fit them for any stage of action, if they choose to avail themselves of the opportunity.

Many a boy, when attending school, thinks to himself, something like this:—"I am going to be a farmer and what need will I have of what I get out of these books, there is no necessity of applying myself to them, as I should, if I was going into some other business," but alas! we very often hear such a person say, when more advanced in years, "I wish that I had my life to live over again, I would know more than I do now."

There is no station in life, however humble it may be, in which some book-learning is not requisite, for us to fill that place as it should be filled.

Education not only allures us from the low and vicious things of this world, but it is a ladder, by which, step by step, we may mount up higher into a nobler and purer atmosphere. To be sure, there are some who do not use this to a good advantage, but those we will pass over, as exceptions to the general rule.

Although Madbury may be regarded by some of our cities, as an insignificant little town, yet, I think that there are scholars in our schools at the present time, who would compare favorably with any whom they may choose to produce, of the same age. And I hope that these scholars, one and all, cheered and encouraged by the parents, will persevere until they attain the top of the hill of knowledge, where they may stand as bright and shining stars, an honor to the town which they represent.

Most respectfully,

LYDIA JENKINS, S. S. Committee.
